

Plants

Plants are the balance between the darkness of earth and the light of the sun. The roots grow deep into the soil, drawing out water and nutrients. The stem then carries the water upward. The leaves take in light and air, and in their breathing, create food for the plant. When a flower blooms, it resembles flames, reaching up to the warmth of the sun. In this way, the plant is created out of the four elements.